

IS IT DANGEROUS?

Jobdesk Novi Jobdesk Novi Jobdesk Novi
Jobdesk Novi Jobdesk Novi Jobdesk Novi
Jobdesk Novi Jobdesk Novi Jobdesk Novi
Jobdesk Novi Jobdesk Novi Jobdesk Novi
Jobdesk Novi Jobdesk Novi Jobdesk Novi
Jobdesk Novi Jobdesk Novi Jobdesk Novi
Jobdesk Novi Jobdesk Novi Jobdesk Novi
Jobdesk Novi Jobdesk Novi Jobdesk Novi

THE MYTH OF WEARING MAKEUP WHILE SLEEPING

Discover how an old Javanese folklore connects with today's skincare wisdom.

In Javanese culture, wisdom often travels through spoken words "pawulang lisan". Among the many lessons passed down through generations, one familiar reminder often echoed softly before bedtime:
"Don't sleep with your makeup on."

To many young women, this sounded like a simple household rule. Yet it lays deeper than a belief rooted in both beauty and spirituality. Elders used to say that sleeping with makeup could bring bad dreams, invite bad luck, or attract negative energy during the night. It wasn't merely about cosmetics; it was about the harmony between body, mind, and soul.

For the Javanese, cleansing the face before sleep symbolized purification a way to wash away the dust of the day, not just from the skin but also from the spirit. In earlier times, when beauty products were made from natural ingredients like bedak dingin (cooling rice powder) or turmeric paste, the act of washing the face had a ritual-like meaning. It showed self-respect, mindfulness, and readiness to rest in peace and purity.

As generations passed, the original philosophy slowly transformed into a simple bedtime myth. Yet the essence remained the same a gentle reminder to take care of oneself. Interestingly, even in today's modern world filled with skincare trends and beauty routines, this ancient advice still rings true.

Sleeping with makeup on can leave residue that clogs pores and traps dirt, causing the skin to feel dull and tired in the morning. The skin, like the soul, needs time to breathe and recover during the night.

Cleansing it before bed helps it renew naturally just as the elders once said, it brings not only better rest but also better energy when you wake up.

This connection between traditional belief and modern skincare shows how timeless Javanese wisdom can be. What was once spoken as a cultural myth now aligns beautifully with the universal idea of self-care that true beauty begins with cleanliness, mindfulness, and respect for oneself.

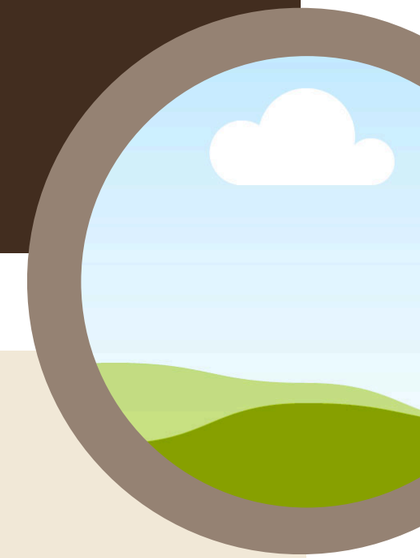

So the next time you're tempted to fall asleep with makeup on, remember this old saying from the past.
Clean your face before going to bed for good dreams, clear skin, and a peaceful heart.

Material

https://gifft.me/id/o/e/wvmu3lgka7dho13c34z4q4ug

strument Speaking: Video Stitch On ktok
tps://vt.tiktok.com/ZSUKm39k9/

PAMALI

Eating in the doorway

°Magazine°

About the myth that you shouldn't sit or eat in the middle of a doorway

Whether you believe it or not, respect it.

In everyday life, we often hear prohibitions such as "don't sit in front of the door," "don't eat in front of the door, " or "don't stand in the doorway." For some people, especially teenage girls, these prohibitions feel outdated and restrictive. However, behind this simple advice lies a deep social and cultural meaning, namely about manners, spatial ethics, and respect for family and the surrounding environment.

This myth is widely known in various regions of Indonesia, especially on the island of Java, such as in the Pasuruan area. Since the time of our ancestors, this prohibition has been believed to bring bad luck to women who violate it, such as difficulty getting married (gak payu rabi) or financial hardship (Rezeki seret) . Although it seems mystical, the actual meaning is more logical. Our ancestors taught that sitting on the doorstep was considered rude because it could block the path of people passing by, cause them to trip, or create disorder in the house.

By wrapping this advice in the form of a myth, people in the past found an effective way to instill good manners without the need for lengthy explanations. Some people also interpret it symbolically: don't sit in the doorway because it means blocking your own path or future. Although scientifically there is no connection between sitting position and fate, this myth lives on and is passed down as part of local identity and wisdom.

Ultimately, this prohibition is not merely an ancient belief, but a form of wisdom that teaches the importance of ethics, politeness, and caring for others. It serves as a reminder that behind simple traditions lie noble values that guide humans to live more orderly and respectfully, just as religious teachings emphasize kindness in every action.

Judul Klmpk?

Yisiiiii sekrapeer kekememdnfksnd xnsmndndmdmdmxmdkdkdkdkdmd

isiiiii sekrapeer kekememdnfksnd xnsmndndmdmdmxmdkdkdkdkdmd hdhkdmndndjdbdbcjckfncnxndjdksksnzkkssn kznsjdkdndnjdidnskdjjdididnjdidjndjj

Yisiiiii sekrapeer kekememdnfksnd xnsmndndmdmdmxmdkdkdkdkdmd vbfnxnx cjcjc xnmzmksln j incl j jododmslsoh jjsoosmdnfnc sosodn d dlsks d sosodn d xosooskdmdkdo d dkkdkdmf dn dkdkdkkdkd

Whether you believe it or not, respect it.

By wrapping this advice in the form of a myth, people in the past found an effective way to instill good manners without the need for lengthy explanations. Some people also interpret it symbolically: don't sit in the doorway because it means blocking your own path or future. Although scientifically there is no connection between sitting position and fate, this myth lives on and is passed down as part of local identity and wisdom.

E-Magos
ENGLISH MAGAZINE OF ESA

judul

ini juga bisa

ini bisa dikasih tulisan

E-Magos
ENGLISH MAGAZINE OF ESA